Her health has a context. Understanding it matters.

Dr. Basuli brings a public-health perspective to women's health education, connecting everyday circumstances, access to information and community support with women's wellbeing. Her background spans public-health programmes, maternal and child health, health communication and healthy-ageing initiatives.

At Nuria, she helps make the bigger picture understandable: how a woman's stage of life and circumstances shape her questions, and how clear education can support informed participation in health conversations.
